

Love food? Love farms!

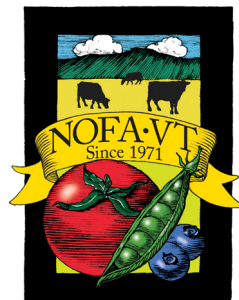

Buy fresh. Buy local. Buy direct.

When you buy directly from a farmer, you get fresh, delicious, and healthy food at a competitive price and the farmer receives a fair value for their product. You can buy directly from a local farm through farmers markets, farm stands, and Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) shares. All of these options give you the same benefits of quality and community, and each also has its own special features.

But doesn't it cost more? Not necessarily! The Northeast Organic

Farming Association of Vermont (NOFA-VT) has conducted research studying the costs of produce at farmers markets, farm stands, and CSAs compared to grocery stores. Especially when purchasing certified organic produce, buying direct is usually less expensive or competitively priced to grocery stores. In addition, more than half of Vermont's farmers markets, and many farm stands and CSAs, accept 3SquaresVT (food stamps) benefits through EBT cards.
